SUBJECT: DIRECTION REGARDING THE CREATION OF A SOURCE OF INCOME DISCRIMINATION ORDINANCE AND EXPLORATION OF A FAIR HOUSING ORDINANCE

RECOMMENDATION

Accept the staff report and:

1. Direct the City Attorney Office to develop a source of income discrimination ordinance including, but not limited to, staff's recommended provisions on the definition of source of income, prohibited activities, applicability, and enforcement.
2. Direct the Housing Department to implement an education and outreach plan in coordination with Santa Clara County Housing Authority that considers process improvements and incentives to increase rental subsidy utilization.
3. Direct the Housing Department to explore the feasibility of a local Fair Housing Ordinance and return to the City Council with a recommendation.

OUTCOME

This report explores the feasibility of creating a source of income ordinance. It summarizes how other localities have addressed their rental market's lack of acceptance of rental subsidies. The report recommends development of an anti-discrimination source of income ordinance and outlines the major provisions to be included. This report also explores how other cities have adopted comprehensive Fair Housing and/or Civil Rights Ordinances, and seeks direction from the City Council to explore the creation of a local Fair Housing Ordinance.

EXECUTIVE SUMMARY

The Housing Choice Voucher Program (HCV), commonly known as the Section 8 Program, provides rental subsidies to low-income residents so they can rent housing on the private market. The tenant pays approximately 32% of their income toward rent, and the voucher makes up the difference. The HCV program is administered by the Santa Clara County Housing Authority. The waitlist to obtain an HCV voucher contains more than 5,000 applicants. Voucher holders in San José are disproportionately disabled, female heads of households, formerly homeless, or people of color and are having trouble finding apartments within the allotted time at the risk of losing their vouchers. A recent survey by the Housing Department found that most listings in San José did not accept HCVs.

Landlords are not prohibited by Federal or California law from rejecting a tenant based solely on the fact that he or she possesses a HCV voucher or other source of tenant-based subsidies, nor are landlords required to consider subsidies as income when qualifying tenants. However, several jurisdictions, including Santa Clara County, have adopted local source of income ordinances with the goal of protecting tenants from discrimination. In San José, stakeholders were divided on the need and efficacy of adopting such an ordinance. Landlords were wary of a source of income ordinance. They noted that education is critical and that first-time offenders should not be harshly penalized. Tenants indicated that discrimination is pervasive and warrants the need for an ordinance that prohibits discrimination based on a tenant's source of income.

In addition to the HCV Program, there are other forms of rental subsidy programs that tenants can use to obtain housing. These include tenant-based rental assistance and rapid rehousing programs. This memorandum recommends that staff draft an ordinance that prohibits discrimination based on source of income, dedicate resources to improve the administration of housing voucher programs, and explore possible incentives for landlords to increase participation in HCV and other rental subsidy programs.

While this memorandum discusses source of income discrimination, it does not address other forms of housing discrimination. Other cities with diverse populations have adopted local civil rights, anti-discrimination, and/or fair housing ordinances and have developed procedures for evaluating complaints and enforcing penalties. Staff seeks direction from City Council to explore the creation of a Fair Housing Ordinance. Such an ordinance would allow the City to clearly declare its fair housing commitment, to ensure it is effectively serving its residents with fair housing concerns, and to plan proactively to increase housing choices for everyone.

BACKGROUND

The Housing Choice Voucher program (HCV) provides rental subsidies to low-income tenants to help these tenants afford to rent privately-owned apartments. The Santa Clara County Housing Authority (SCCHA) manages the City of San José Housing Authority's HCV program. Under HCV, voucher holders pay 32% of their gross income toward rent, and SCCHA pays a property owner the difference between the renters' payment and the SCCHA-approved market rent. The City and the County of Santa Clara also offer rental subsidies to extremely-low-income residents with rules similar to the HCV program.

Voucher holders across the U.S. are experiencing difficulty finding landlords who will rent to them. Many apartment owners choose not to participate in housing voucher or rental subsidy programs for a variety of reasons. Applicants with rental subsidies are often disqualified because landlords do not consider subsidies as part of the tenants' income, which results in subsidized tenants being unable to meet the minimum household income requirement for an apartment. Many landlords require that the combined income of all household members equals 2.5 to 3 times the monthly rent amount. Attachment A compares total income-to-rent ratios for four actual clients in San José. The comparison suggests that even including rental assistance as part of an applicant's income, some applicants would not meet the above-mentioned income test. This underscores the importance of employing additional measures such as landlord outreach, process improvements, and possible incentives as ways to mitigate landlords' assessment of risk on applicants' ability to pay and on their willingness to accept rental subsidies.

The issue is serious enough that over 42 jurisdictions nationwide have adopted policies or ordinances protecting voucher holders.¹ These major cities include San Francisco, Seattle, Minneapolis, Philadelphia, and New York City.

Source of Housing Discrimination Laws in California

California's Fair Housing and Employment Act (FEHA) closely resembles the Federal Fair Housing Act and makes it unlawful to discriminate against numerous protected classes including one's source of income. However, California courts have held that California's source of income discrimination law does not apply to HCVs holders. Rather, California's source of income protection extends to "lawful, verifiable income paid directly to a tenant or paid to a representative of a tenant" (Government Code Section 12927(i)) such as Social Security Supplemental Security Income, veteran's benefits, CalWorks, General Assistance, child support, alimony, unemployment insurance, pensions, and wages. This has left many rental subsidy holders vulnerable to discrimination, thus making a local provision necessary to prevent discrimination.

While federal and state housing laws do not protect rental subsidy holders, local jurisdictions are able to pass ordinances to fill that gap. Santa Clara County, San Francisco, Mill Valley, East Palo Alto, Corte Madera, Marin County, and Santa Monica have adopted source of income anti-discrimination ordinances. These ordinances prohibit owners from using HCVs and other tenant-based subsidies as the grounds for rejecting or refusing an applicant.

Santa Clara County Adopted a Source of Income Ordinance

On March 25, 2017, the Santa Clara County Board of Supervisors adopted ordinance number NS-507.1 to "ensure that all persons with the ability to pay for housing are considered for housing, regardless of whether they receive a housing subsidy or housing assistance of any kind.” The ordinance applies to unincorporated areas under the County’s jurisdiction, and prohibits landlords from:

- Rejecting, refusing to consider, terminating tenancy, conditioning, or creating different standards for renters with vouchers;
- Considering rental voucher income differently than other income in financial standards;
- Refusing or restricting facilities, services, repairs, or improvements for current or prospective renters; and,
- Advertising or communicating limitations or discrimination based on voucher possession.

The full text of the County ordinance is provided as Attachment B.

City Council Direction

On June 23, 2015, the City Council identified development of an ordinance prohibiting discrimination based on income source, along with revisions to the Apartment Rent Ordinance, as a policy priority for FY 2015-16. On September 1, 2015, the City Council accepted staff’s recommendation that the source of income ordinance be delayed given that the City of Santa Monica’s source of income ordinance was being challenged in court. On January 30, 2017, the Los Angeles County Superior Court upheld the Santa Monica law.

On April 25, 2017, the City Council adopted the local Analysis of Impediments (AI) required by the U.S. Department of Housing and Urban Development as a basis for the City’s Consolidated Plan. That action included direction to “explore the feasibility of an ordinance to address source of income discrimination.” This memorandum addresses the City Council direction from April 25, 2017, and from 2015.

ANALYSIS

The Housing Department has formulated key provisions of an ordinance intended to meet the City Council direction to develop an ordinance prohibiting discrimination based on income source.

Staff Completed Extensive Analysis and Outreach

In developing the provisions of a source of income ordinance, staff completed the following tasks:

- Evaluated the demographics of the HCV Program;
- Completed an analysis of online advertisements for housing;
- Evaluated other source of income ordinances in California; and,
- Considered stakeholder feedback.

The results of this analysis is provided in the following sections of this document.

Demographics of the Housing Choice Voucher Program

The San José Metro Area (which includes Santa Clara and San Benito Counties) is the second most expensive rental and homeownership market in the Country.² Demand for the HCV program in Santa Clara County is extremely high. The current waitlist last opened briefly in 2006 with 50,000 applicants and now has approximately 5,100 applicants. Because of the administrative burden to maintain the list, which includes tracking the status and address of each household, the list has been mostly closed for the past 12 years. The need for housing assistance is arguably greater than ever, yet an estimated 680 HCV holders are currently searching for apartments in Santa Clara County.³ Tenants who cannot find an apartment in the required period (six months, plus a potential three-month extension) face losing their voucher and possible homelessness, with no possibility of applying again for a new voucher as the HCV waiting list is closed.

By the federal program's design, HCV encourages local housing authorities to prioritize renters who are vulnerable and in need of housing assistance. This is true for the approximately 11,796 HCV recipients are renting in San José. Compared to the average population, voucher holders in San José are more likely to have special needs, to possess disabilities, and to have experienced homelessness. Of these clients, 50% are disabled heads of household, 25% are families with a person with disabilities who is not the head of household, 24% are female heads of household, 13% are families with minor children, and 8% are formerly homeless.

HCV recipients are also more likely than San José's overall population to be people of color and to pay a high percentage of their income on housing costs. The following table (Table 1) compares the racial breakdown of HCV recipients in San José with that of total rental households with severe housing cost burden, and then with overall households in San José. The table shows that Asian, Latino, Black, and American Indian households are overrepresented in the pool of San José HCV holders. White and Native Hawaiian/Pacific Islander households are underrepresented in the pool of HCV holders. For severe housing cost burden, Latino, Black, American Indian/Alaska Native, and Native Hawaiian/Pacific Islander households are overrepresented while White and Asian households are underrepresented.

Data from Table 1 indicates that these households are disproportionately represented in the HCV population. This means that refusals to accept Section 8 vouchers has a higher likelihood of impacting communities of color who are overrepresented in the voucher population.

Many San José Apartment Owners Do Not Accept Housing Choice Vouchers

The Housing Department conducted its own research to assess the extent to which San José properties deny voucher holders the opportunity to apply. Staff tracked all San José apartment rental listings on Craigslist and Apartments.com for four weeks during July and August of 2017. Staff tracked a total of 559 listings during this period and found that 26.7% of listings explicitly stated “no section 8.” To further clarify, staff posed as voucher holders and called properties that didn’t mention Section 8 in their advertisement to ask if the listings were available to Section 8 holders. Of those properties, 39.4% said verbally that they would not accept Section 8. In total, 66% of apartment listings indicated they would not accept vouchers. These survey findings support the assertion that a significant number of properties in San José have chosen not to accept HCVs.

California Cities Have Adopted Source of Income Ordinances

The Housing Department evaluated source of income policies from Marin County, Mill Valley, Corte Madera, San Francisco, East Palo Alto, Foster City, Santa Clara County, and Santa

Monica. These policies were enacted over the past 20 years and vary in their objectives. Attachment C compares the core elements of these ordinances and provides context for the staff recommendation.

Owners Are Wary of an Ordinance – Tenants Experience Difficulty Finding Housing

The Housing Department conducted a number of community meetings involving property owners and renters that discussed source of income policy. The specific dates of these meetings can be found in the Public Outreach Section of this memorandum. Representative comments are below.

Landlords indicated various reasons why they chose not to participate in the HCV Program. A primary reason stated was that they did not want to deal with the administrative burden of joining the program, such as getting properties inspected, and waiting for voucher payments to be received. One participant mentioned that if more landlords knew they could get close to market rents, they might be more willing to participate. Another landlord felt that the word “discrimination” should not be used with regards to this issue, as negative connotations of unjust discrimination based on race or income are not necessarily apt if a landlord simply chooses not to want to join a program. Other comments focused on negative perceptions and/or negative past experiences with HCV tenants. Some believed that such tenants with vouchers were more likely to damage apartments, while other landlords stated a reluctance to rent to people of certain races or income levels.

Landlords were wary of a source of income ordinance, noting that that ongoing education is critical if a new policy were to go into place, and that penalties should not be too severe, especially for first offenses. They also mentioned that it would be helpful for SCCHA to conduct more outreach to landlords to explain the program and the rents that can be charged, and to improve the experience of landlords in the HCV program in order to attract more landlords to the program.

Tenant stakeholders said they had personally experienced or knew others who had difficulty finding landlords who would accept vouchers. Tenants reported that it was common for landlords to advertise “no section 8” in their listings. They strongly supported the creation of a source of income ordinance in San José. Most thought it should apply to all rental units to maximize the chances that tenants can utilize their vouchers.

Source of Income Ordinance

After considering the research, analysis, and public input summarized above, the Housing Department drafted the following objectives to guide the development of an ordinance prohibiting discrimination based on a tenant’s source of income:

1. All persons with the ability to pay for housing should be treated equally for housing, regardless of whether they receive a housing subsidy or housing assistance of any kind.

2. The time it takes for a voucher holder to find housing should not be adversely impacted due to source of income.
3. Tenants with housing subsidies should not be displaced from San José.
4. Education is necessary to increase landlord awareness of housing rental subsidy programs.

Recommended Ordinance Provisions

The following section recommends the core provisions to include in an ordinance prohibiting discrimination based on the tenant's source of income. These provisions address the objectives previously stated.

1. Definition of Source of Income

The Ordinance would define source of income to include all housing and rental subsidy programs, including security deposit programs.

2. Prohibited activities

The Ordinance would prohibit a landlord from imposing different terms or conditions on tenants with rental subsidies compared to those without rental subsidies, advertising that housing vouchers are not accepted, or using a financial or income standard that favors tenants with income not supplemented by a rental subsidy. Landlords could not say a unit is available for one applicant and say it is unavailable for voucher holder with equal or greater income.

3. Applicability

The Ordinance would apply to all rental housing, regardless of building size, to maximize its effectiveness and to ensure that larger households seeking to rent a single-family home are also protected. An exception would be provided for an owner-occupied home that has no more than a single tenant, where the owner complies with the ordinance's prohibition on advertisements that discriminate on the basis of source of income.

4. Enforcement

The Ordinance would contain two different enforcement provisions, publicly- and privately-initiated enforcement. A city-initiated provision would utilize the City's administrative citation procedures. The procedure would allow a warning to be issued to first-time offenders, but subsequent offenders would receive administrative citations with gradually increasing monetary fines. Privately-initiated enforcement would allow for tenants or certain representatives such as legal advocates to file civil actions against landlords who violate the ordinance.

To a large extent, the recommended provisions align with the County Ordinance. However, staff is not recommending a criminal enforcement provision that mirrors the County Ordinance. This decision is based on stakeholder feedback and staff's recommendation to focus on education and process improvements to increase landlord participation.

Increase Education and Explore Incentives and Administrative Efficiencies to Increase Landlord Participation

Additional education about housing voucher programs is a key component to educate landlords on rental subsidy programs with a goal to gain broader acceptance of the program. Staff would develop an education and outreach plan to address this need. Lastly, staff would work in partnership with the Santa Clara Housing Authority to explore additional incentives to landlords who rent to voucher holders.

During the public outreach process on this subject, landlords commented that housing voucher program administration could be improved to speed up payments, reduce paperwork, and to minimize financial risk. Staff would work with the Santa Clara County Housing Authority and stakeholders to explore possible administrative improvements and landlord incentives that would increase acceptance of housing vouchers.

Staff will return to the City Council with a plan to support outreach and the development of incentives and administrative improvements.

Other Cities Have Adopted Broader Civil Rights and Fair Housing Ordinances

For many other cities, source of income is added as a protected class instead of existing as a stand-alone ordinance. It is important to place source of income discrimination into a larger human rights context, as do many large cities that employ broader anti-discrimination ordinances, technical assistance programs, and commissions. New York, Chicago, Dallas, San Francisco, Seattle, Philadelphia, and other cities have adopted local civil rights, anti-discrimination, and/or fair housing ordinances and have developed procedures for evaluating complaints and enforcing penalties.

Chicago adopted a Human Rights Ordinance and a Fair Housing Ordinance to prohibit discrimination based on a list of protected classes. Chicago's Commission on Human Relations investigates complaints and has staff that can answer questions and help draft a complaint. Once a complaint is filed, the Commission notifies the accused and sets a deadline for a written response. If "substantial evidence" is found, the case moves to an administrative hearing and then to the Board of Commissioners for a final ruling. The maximum penalty for a violation under these ordinances is $500 per incident.

Cities implement these ordinances because some classes are not protected at the federal level and because some state and federal processes may be slow, difficult to navigate, or may lack local outreach and education efforts. State and federal agencies often have a much larger volume of complaints and therefore a complaint at the state or federal level can be time consuming. Local cities are generally able to process complaints more promptly and can be less intimidating. Residents of these cities have a choice of jurisdiction under which they may file.

Consider Adoption of a Local Fair Housing Ordinance

San José is an ethnically and racially diverse community, with a significant number of people of color and immigrant families. San José's population consists of 38% White non-Hispanic or Latino, 31% Asian, 25% Hispanic, 3% African American and 2% other. English is the primary language spoken in approximately 44% of San José homes. Other languages are primarily spoken in approximately 57% of households.⁵ This diversity increases the likelihood that fair housing issues may surface. A fair housing policy would allow the city to better serve our residents and would increase awareness. In short, a fair housing policy allows the City to clearly declare its fair housing commitment, to ensure it is effectively serving its residents with fair housing concerns, and to plan proactively to increase housing choices for everyone. Staff seeks direction to explore the creation of such an ordinance.

EVALUATION AND FOLLOW-UP

If the City Council directs staff to develop an ordinance, staff will draft an ordinance, host public and stakeholder meetings, and to return to City Council this fall.

PUBLIC OUTREACH

The Housing Department conducted the following outreach. A summary of the feedback received is included in the analysis section of this memorandum.

- December 12, 2017: Stakeholder Meeting: Renter's Coalition
- January 10, 2018: Stakeholder Meeting: Renter's Coalition
- January 29, 2018: Stakeholder Meeting: California Apartment Association
- February 6, 2018: Stakeholder Meeting: Renter's Coalition
- February 7, 2018: Public Meeting #1: City Hall
- February 12, 2018: Public Meeting #2: Seven Trees Community Center
- February 15, 2018: Stakeholder Meeting: California Apartment Association
- February 22, 2018: Stakeholder Meeting: Tenants
- March 8, 2018: Housing and Community Development Commission (HCDC)

COORDINATION

This memorandum was coordinated with the City Attorney's Office.

⁵ The 2012-2016 American Community Survey.

COMMISSION RECOMMENDATION/INPUT

On March 8, 2018, City staff presented a draft source of income discrimination policy framework to the City's Housing and Community Development Commission (HCDC). The Commission passed the following motions:

- HCDC accepted the staff report and provided feedback on the policy framework.
- HCDC passed a motion suggesting that the City incorporate and research incentives for landlords to participate in housing voucher programs.
- HCDC passed a motion recommending that the City conduct research on ways to prequalify landlord units for Housing Choice Voucher consideration.

A summary of the public input received from this meeting, as well as comments from the Commissioners, is provided as Attachment D.

FISCAL/POLICY ALIGNMENT

A Source of Income Ordinance aligns with the following General Plan goals:

H-1.7 Comply with State and Federal laws prohibiting discrimination in housing and that support fair and equal access to housing.

H-1.16 Identify, assess, and implement potential tools, policies, or programs to prevent or to mitigate the displacement of existing low-income residents due to market forces or to infrastructure investment.

This also responds to goal 1.12 in the City's Analysis of Impediments to Fair Housing which states, "explore the feasibility of an ordinance to address source of income discrimination."

COST SUMMARY/IMPLICATIONS

If the City Council were to direct staff to implement a Source of Income Discrimination Ordinance, the Housing Department would return with a plan to oversee administration of the ordinance. This would likely entail the addition of one new management-level position. This position would evaluate and track complaints, educate landlords on housing voucher programs, coordinate with the Housing Authority and other stakeholders on possible process improvements and incentives, and address enforcement of the ordinance. Funding for administration of the Ordinance would be determined and presented as part of the plan.

Attachment D:

Summary of Public Input from the Housing and Community Development Commission Meeting on March 8, 2018

Members of the public commented that the first HCV payment sometimes took much longer than anticipated, that landlords should have the right to decline because government programs come with strings attached, and concerns that the Housing Authority can reduce the payment standard. Other stakeholders called for a more systematic approach including organizations that administer security deposit programs and for incentives to get more landlords to participate.

HCDC commissioners commented that only enforcing violations related to advertising would be insufficient to help voucher holders secure apartments. Some Commissioners stated that San José's ordinance should at least match the Santa Clara County source of income ordinance if not exceed it. A few commissioners asked how effective such ordinances have been in other Cities. Some commissioners were concerned an ordinance would limit landlord's ability to manage risk and that voucher program administration should be improved in tandem. One Commissioner suggested using funds for faster initial payments to landlords instead of adding a new staff position. Finally, one Commissioner asked if the ordinance would allow landlords to decline to participate if the payment standard approved by the housing authority was too low for a given unit.
